Popularity Contest

Object:

The object of Popularity Contest is to be the last person standing.

Setup:

Give each player a hand of five cards consisting of:

Game Play:

Popularity is played over a series of rounds.

Each round consists of 3 phases:

Popularity Phase:

Evaluation Phase:

Gather Phase:

Popularity Contest

Popularity Phase:

Each non eliminated player gives up to 3 cards played face down to any other players. Cards can be given to any players including ones self. Multiple cards can be given to the same player.

Each eliminated player shuffles their remaining cards and draws one at random. The drawn card may be played on any other player that is still in the game or returned to the eliminated players card stack. Once an eliminated player has exhausted their available cards, they no longer participate in the game.

Popularity Contest

Evaluation Phase:

Each player reveals the cards given to them during the popularity phase. Values are calculated by adding and subtracting the cards. The player with the lowest popularity value is eliminated.

If a player receives a zero card and has the highest value among all the players, that player is also eliminated.

If a player receives no cards, that players score for the round is zero. A player with no cards can be eliminated if they have the lowest popularity.

In the case of a tie, no one is eliminated (safety in numbers). Only 1 lowest popularity and 1 highest popularity (with a zero card) player can be eliminated per round.

Popularity Contest

Gather Phase:

All non eliminated players gather up the cards that they received in the previous round and adds them to their hand.

All eliminated players shuffle their hand and received cards into a stack that they will draw from in future rounds.

Eliminated players are not allowed to look at their cards.

Play proceeds until only one player remains.

When there are only two players remaining, the player with the highest popularity score is the winner. The zero cards do not eliminate the highest player when there are less than three players left in the game.

FAQ:

What is the best way to count the score when you have several cards: The best way to count your score is to use the +2 to cancel out -2 and -1 to cancel out +1, then total the remaining cards and that will be your score.

What if I get no cards: When you receive no cards during the popularity phase, your score is zero.

Can I be eliminated with no cards: Yes if zero is the lowest popularity score then you would be eliminated.

I was eliminated can I still play: Yes you shuffle your remaining cards, draw one at random, look at it, and choose if you want to play it on someone.

If I am tied for lowest are we both eliminated: No there are safety in numbers so tied players are not eliminated (High or Low)

When three players are left can one person win if both a low player and a high player (with a zero) are eliminated: Yes

4 - 5 Player Variant:

For a more strategic game for fewer players (4-5 players), give each player a die. Set each die to 1 at the start of the game. Each time a game concludes with a winner, raise that persons die 1 pip. Redistribute the cards back to starting hands and play again. First players die to reach 6 is the winner.
